NYC Guide to Suicide Prevention, Services and Resources

The Purpose of This Guide

Responding to people who are depressed, in crisis and possibly suicidal frequently makes those responsible for their care feel uncomfortable and inadequate, often believing that they do not have the knowledge, tools and resources to be effective.

This is something the Samaritans of New York, the community-based organization that operates NYC's 24-hour suicide prevention hotline, has observed first-hand working with over 30,000 lay and professional caregivers through our public education program and from collaborations with hundreds of non-profit agencies, government officials and policy analysts over the past 25 years.

The NYC Guide to Suicide Prevention, Services and Resources is designed to address the needs of those who provide care to people who are in distress or at-risk for suicide or who have lost a loved one to suicide by providing them with key linkages to resources, tools, research and support services.

The Audience for the Guide

This Guide can be used by everyone who provides personal or professional care, support or treatment to individuals who are depressed, in distress, are experiencing trauma or some form of mental illness. This includes family members, friends and colleagues as well as social workers, psychologists, case managers, guidance counselors and emergency response staff working in community, academic, recreational or clinical settings. It can also be used by those who are experiencing depression or suicidal feelings themselves.

How to Use This Guide

Scan the pages of this booklet first to get a feel for its contents then use the Guide in accordance with your immediate needs and the role you are providing. Possibilities include:

- for a comprehensive overview of the primary components of suicide prevention
- for developing specific guidelines and a plan for trying to help someone in crisis
- for guidance and information on how to access effective resources and support services
- for expert feedback, training and technical support in addressing specific issues.

Suicide As a Public Health Problem

Suicide, the 10th leading cause of death in the US, is a public health problem that touches people of every age, race, economic background, culture and sexual identity and can have lasting effects that impact individuals, families and communities as well. People experience depressive and/or suicidal feelings for countless and complex reasons, some of them identifiable or able to be diagnosed, others tied to less specific social, environmental, familial and genetic factors.

Talk of suicide makes most people uncomfortable. A fact that leads to many of the misconceptions we have about helping people who are suicidal which, in turn, often negatively impacts our ability to respond; the most significant myth being that talking about suicide might give someone the idea (it does not). Other misconceptions that interfere in helping people in crisis include a belief that people who are suicidal just want attention and if someone is determined to kill themselves, there is nothing anyone can do about it.

Suicide Can Be Prevented

The good news is that, frequently, suicide can be prevented. In fact, as many as 70% of the people who attempt suicide do something to let others know before they act.

Suicide prevention is not about death and dying but life and living and exploring options, helping people who are depressed and in crisis to get through their difficult times, providing them with additional coping tools, access to resources and treatment and letting them know they are not alone.

A Look At Statistics and Trends of At-Risk Populations

Overview Suicide leads to over 36,000 deaths annually in the US, causing as many fatalities as homicide and AIDS combined. As many as 90% of the people who die from suicide have a diagnosable mental health problem, though less than one-third seek treatment. Depression affects nearly 10% of adults in a given year and an estimated 4% will have suicidal thoughts.

Over 5,000,000 Americans have attempted suicide, with women attempting three times more frequently than men but men being four times more likely to die. In fact, 75% of all suicides in the US are committed by men, the largest percentage from elderly and older middle-age men.

Anyone can experience the depressive, stressful or traumatic feelings that can lead to suicide, no matter what their education, economic or social standing or personal relationships. Nowhere is this seen more strongly than in NYC whose rich cultural diversity leads to more populations that are high risk for suicide being in one place than anywhere in the world.

This includes but is not limited to students at our 26 colleges, our large GLBTQ community, the large number of older adults, chronic sick and mentally ill, those with alcohol and substance abuse problems, the unemployed, homeless, immigrants, victims of violence, sexual abuse and bullying, returning veterans, Asians and Latinas and others.

Incidence Suicide is the 2nd leading cause of death of teenagers, 2nd of college students, 2nd of males 25-34, 4th of males 35-54, 3rd of women 15-24, 4th of women 25-44, etc. Suicide rates for men rise with age, most significantly after 65; for women, rates peak between 45-54, and after age 75.

Though the elderly make up 13% of the population, they represent 18% of the suicides. Among older adults who commit suicide, 20% visited a primary care physician the same day as their suicide, 40% within a week. Many of those who are depressed don't realize they have depression.

A previous attempt is the leading indicator of suicide risk, with alcohol and substance abuse a factor in about 30% of all suicides; 7% of individuals with alcohol dependence will die by suicide. Ready access to lethal means increases suicide risk in individuals with depression. Suicide risk can be exacerbated after discharge from an inpatient or residential setting for those at significant risk.

New York City About 6% of NYC adults report clinically significant emotional distress with highest rates seen in women, Hispanics, those with low incomes and chronic diseases like asthma and diabetes. Over 50% of NYC suicides are committed by males age 25-54. About 30% of NYC's public high school students experience depression annually, 8.5% report a suicide attempt, 3% an attempt that required medical care. Recent trends show increases in attempts by young Latinas, younger and older Asian-American females and young GLBTQ.

In the Workplace A minimum of 7% of full-time workers battle depression. A strong relationship exists between unemployment, the economy and suicide, with unemployed individuals having between two and four times the suicide rate of those employed. Economic strain and personal financial crises have been documented as precipitating events in individual deaths by suicide.

Suicide Survivors Over 5,000,000 Americans have lost a loved one to suicide, with research suggesting that each loss directly impacts at least six people; meaning that close to 600 individuals become a survivor of suicide loss every day. Suicide survivors are at increased risk of suicide themselves.

Responding to Someone Who is Depressed or in Crisis

Whether you are a family member, friend or health professional, it is always beneficial to have a plan in mind before attempting to help an individual who is depressed or in distress. Though crisis response and public health experts may use different approaches when responding to someone in distress, most of these approaches consist of the following steps:

- create a safe environment
- establish rapport and trust
- identify warning signs, risk and protective factors
- assess and determine suicide risk
- explore available resources
- decide best course of action
- provide ongoing support

Create a Safe Environment

Do your best to provide the person you are responding to with an environment that is quiet, private and where you will not be interrupted; where he or she can receive your undivided attention and focus without distractions from other people, phone calls or activities.

Establish Rapport and Trust

Demonstrate your concern by engaging the person in a conversation, listening carefully to what he/she is saying without immediately expressing your own opinion. The focus should be on what the person is thinking and feeling. The more comfortable a person feels with us, the more we can learn about their situation and state of mind and the greater the likelihood they will seek support and allow us to help.

Identify Warning Signs, Risk and Protective Factors

Recognize the circumstances and environments that can increase an individual's risk for suicide; the behaviors and states of mind that are warning signs of depression; and the behaviors, environments and relationships that reduce that person's risk. This will help us to develop a clearer picture of the individual's current situation.

RISK FACTORS Some of the issues tied to background, history, environment and/or circumstances that increase the risk potential for suicide:

- previous self-destructive or suicidal behavior
- any type of loss of parent or loved one
- social isolation and/or alienation
- barriers to accessing health care/treatment
- cultural/religious beliefs supporting suicide
- loss of job, income, unemployment, benefits
- personal/family history of suicide, psychiatric disorder
- alcohol or other form of substance abuse
- history of trauma, abuse, violence or neglect
- easy access to lethal means (especially guns)
- unwillingness to access help due to stigma
- problems tied to sexual identity and relationships

WARNING SIGNS Some of the affects, behaviors and actions that are often related to an individual experiencing depression and/or suicide ideation:

- a sudden worsening of school performance
- a heightened fixation with death or violence
- difficulty in adjusting to gender identity
- extreme alcohol and/or substance abuse
- impulsive and/or risk-taking behavior
- announcing a plan to kill him or herself
- statements like: 'I wish I was dead,' 'No one will miss me when I'm gone' or 'I think I'll just disappear.'
- changes in eating and sleeping habits
- violent mood swings, changes in personality
- being a victim of bullying, sexual abuse, violence
- recent or ongoing impulsive and aggressive acts
- self-destructive and violent behavior towards others
- obtaining a weapon or other lethal means
- sudden giving away of prized possessions
- talking or writing about suicide or death

PROTECTIVE FACTORS Some of the key behaviors, environments and relationships that reduce the likelihood of suicide and enhance resilience:

- supportive and caring family and friends
- access to medical and mental health care
- restricted access to lethal methods of suicide
- connectedness to community, school, organizations
- learned skills and behaviors (e.g., problem-solving, conflict resolution, anger management, etc.)
- access to immediate and ongoing support and care
- cultural and religious beliefs that discourage suicide

Assess and Determine Suicide Risk

There are different methods and tools that can be easily accessed and utilized to determine the extent of an individual's depressive feelings and/or thoughts tied to suicide. These include depression screening tools that can measure the "severity" of an individual's depression, risk assessment models that can measure the individual's "intent" to attempt suicide, degree of risk, capability to attempt or how much he or she has visualized the act (like the assessment tool shown below).

In the context of what you have seen, heard and know about the individual you are responding to, determine answers to the following questions:

- Is the person expressing thoughts about suicide or has he or she done so in the recent past?
- Does the person have a plan in place to attempt suicide and the means available to do so?
- Has the person set a specific time to act on his or her plan and when is it?
- Has the person ever attempted suicide in the past or had a family member that did so?

Explore Available Resources

Utilizing professional, familial, spiritual and other resources increases the family member, friend or health professional's ability to maintain ongoing support for the person in distress and increases the effectiveness of the response. Resources may include referrals for ongoing clinical care, immediately accessible crisis response services like hotlines and mobile crisis units, support groups, education and information, technical support, etc.

Decide Best Course of Action

Using what you have learned from talking to the person you are responding to—his/her warning signs, risk and protective factors, his/her state of mind and level of suicide risk—and the resources and other supports that are available, decide what else you need to learn or who you need to talk to in order to respond effectively. Of most importance, if the person is significantly depressed or has thoughts of suicide, identify and remove all access to lethal means (including guns, controlled substances or any materials that could be used to harm oneself).

Provide Ongoing Support

Responding to a person who is in distress or suicidal is often an ongoing process that requires a consistent level of followup, support and utilization of resources. For the benefit of the person you are helping as well as yourself, do not go it alone. Implement a multi-faceted team approach consisting of family, health professionals, members of the community, colleagues, etc. to ensure the best results and prevent caregiver stress and burnout.

Postvention and Suicide Survivors

Postvention refers to the responses, activities and strategies utilized after a death from suicide to provide care, support and safety to those touched directly or indirectly by this traumatic loss.

The goal of postvention is to ease or reduce the effects of that loss and the grieving process for those impacted, to increase their “protective factors” and support network and to encourage resilience and use of coping tools (e.g., engaging family members and/or spiritual support, maintaining involvement in current activities, utilizing resources like hotlines and counseling).

Experiencing a Suicide Loss

The term “suicide survivor” refers to people who have lost a loved one to suicide. Survivors experience the same emotions (anxiety, despair, anger, denial, shock, isolation, etc.) and major life-changing circumstances that most people experience when they lose someone they love or are close to, but frequently these emotions and states of mind are much more acute and longer-lasting.

Suicide survivors face factors that are unique to this type of loss; most importantly, the fact that those who lose a loved one to suicide are, often, denied the familial and social support so necessary to the healing component of the bereavement process. And, survivors are at higher risk for suicide themselves.

The impact of a suicide loss can be so dramatic that a survivor may experience symptoms and behaviors that are usually associated with post-traumatic stress. The loss may also exacerbate an already existing physical or mental illness, especially depression and mood and anxiety disorders; and undermine an individual’s sobriety or trigger an increase in or return to self-destructive behavior.

The Impact of Stigma

Due to stigma and the many misconceptions people have about suicide, survivors often experience intense feelings of guilt and shame, sometimes actually being blamed (or blaming themselves) for not being able to prevent the death; stemming from the belief that, somehow, they should have seen the signs and been able to do something to prevent it.

Adding to that pain and increasing their isolation is the belief that those who lose a loved one to suicide do not want to talk about it when, like any traumatic loss, the opposite is true. Survivors often report being denied the comfort and solace from family and friends that the bereaved normally receive at funerals and memorial services due to many people’s discomfort with the subject and fears tied to addressing it.

Those Needing Postvention Support

Though every individual touched by the loss from suicide is significant, extra attention should be placed on those who are most vulnerable, have experienced other dramatic losses, traumas or mental illness or were closely related in some manner to the deceased.

Obviously family members, close friends and colleagues, loved ones and others who have had a personal relationship with the person who died fit this category but so do caregivers, teachers, coaches, guidance counselors, therapists, clergy, members of law enforcement and others who may have known the individual.

Postvention should begin as soon as possible. Though peer and public health experts vary in their focus and emphasis, most of their postvention responses try to maintain a balance of:

- addressing the issue directly while establishing a safe, protective environment
- clearly focused messaging while monitoring communications and social media
- carefully planning and managing tributes and events while watching for those ‘at-risk’
- helping to normalize the situation while expanding support networks/access to resources
- engaging all members of the community—parents, teachers, students, mental health professionals, clergy, funeral directors, etc.—in the planning and implementation.

Developing Postvention Responses

Since news about the suicide will spread rapidly through word of mouth, e-mail and the media, responses should begin in as timely a manner as possible. Postvention can take place on many levels—among individuals, family, group, team and class members, professional and support staff, etc., throughout the school, organization or workplace, and in the community at-large.

As 9/11 has taught us, an individual does not have to be directly or personally connected to a traumatic event to be deeply impacted and/or overwhelmed by the emotions that result from a tragedy. So it is with suicide.

The following highlight some of the key issues to consider when developing a postvention plan:

Messaging and Social Networking—clear communication to all those touched by it, acknowledging the loss and its impact as well as the fact that there is a plan in place, steps are being taken and support is available must be disseminated. All messaging—especially through social networking—should be monitored for sensationalism, misinformation and the possibility of it revealing others who are at risk.

Spontaneous Tributes and Shrines—respecting the need for those touched by the death to express their grief must be balanced with monitoring and managing spontaneous tributes to the person who died to prevent the glamorizing of the suicide act or the implication that, by taking his or her own life, the individual gained a level of fame or notoriety they had not been able to achieve previously.

Identifying Those At-Risk—observe and gather feedback on individuals that appear to be impacted most strongly by the death, especially those who were closest to the deceased, who identified with him or her and those who have been exposed to or experienced some previous form of trauma or mental illness.

Contagion and Copycats—when a suicide occurs it may, under some circumstances, influence or encourage other members of that community to act on their own suicidal impulses, especially if they are already at risk or have some previous experience with trauma or mental illness. Teenagers and young adults are most likely to be impacted by the contagion or copycat phenomenon.

Media Reporting—working with the media and others who disseminate information is important to prevent graphic depiction of the suicide through pictures or detailed descriptions of the means the person used to commit suicide as well as stories that seek to make the listener/reader identify with the deceased or portray the death as inevitable or the result of a heroic or courageous act.

Caregivers and Clinicians—though often overlooked, research suggests that caregivers' response to the loss of someone they have been working with or caring for to suicide is very similar to family and loved ones. In addition to the personal impact, the caregiver faces questions of confidence, competence, professional responsibility, blame (from self and others) and career status.

Medical Examiner and Law Enforcement—the police and medical examiner are required by law to respond to a death as a potential crime scene (no matter how obvious it is to those at the site) until all the necessary procedures have been followed and eyewitness statements taken. Understanding their roles and responsibilities will prevent a painful situation from getting worse and help gain cooperation and sensitivity.

Mobile Applications

A Friend Asks (Jason Foundation)

this free app is designed to teach users how to recognize the signs that someone close to them may be thinking about suicide, and the best way to reach out to them. Includes how to determine suicide risk and a do's and don'ts list on maintaining sensitivity. (Android, iOS)

MY3 (National Suicide Lifeline)

targeted for those who are depressed or suicidal themselves, with the goal of enhancing their support network and developing their own Safety Plan of contacts, activities, resources to utilize during periods of distress and suicidal feelings, so that they can easily act when they recognize their own warning signs. (Android, iOS)

Operation Reach Out

aimed at veterans and military families, this app is for people having suicidal thoughts as well as friends, family or service members concerned that someone they know might be suicidal. The app comes with numerous video vignettes offering suicide counseling, do's and don'ts when reaching out to a potentially suicidal loved one and other resources. (iOS)

Suicide Safe by SAMHSA

this app is a suicide prevention learning tool for primary care and behavioral health providers based on the nationally recognized Suicide Assessment Five-step Evaluation and Triage (SAFE-T) practice guidelines. App offers tips on how to communicate effectively with patients and their families, how to determine appropriate next steps and make referrals to community resources. (Android, iOS)

Safety Plan

designed to provide individuals with an emergency plan and prevention resources for suicide crises, this app helps individuals identify their own suicide warning signs, create coping strategies, identify positive contacts and social settings to distract from the crisis, enhance protective factors and reduce their access to lethal means. (Android, iOS)
